

UCA Harvey Relief Fund to Help Houston Chinese Community

Nothing could be worse than being hit by a ruthless hurricane like Harvey; nothing, however, could warm your hearts more than getting all the support and care from Chinese American communities across the nation.

After the hurricane hit Houston, local Chinese community organizations, such as Sunrise Youth Soccer Club and Houston Chinese Alliance (HCA), <http://hcaus.org/>, started recruiting and training volunteers to help local families with their flooded and damaged houses.

UCA also reached out to Chinese community in Houston and set up jointly with Chinese Community Center, <http://ccchouston.org/>, and Southern News Group, <http://southernnewsgroup.com/>, an UCA Harvey Relief Fund and provided $3 000 to HCA to supplement the tools and equipment that the Sunrise and HCA volunteers needed for their relief efforts started on the Labor Day weekend.

Those volunteers are true heroes of our community. Some of them left their own flooded houses behind, and instead worked day and night to help other families. Thousands more houses got flooded by discharge from the nearly overflowing reservoirs after the hurricane. In a race against time, they had to remove flooded drywalls and floors and to dehumidify interior of houses to avoid the growth of mold, an extreme hazard to health after flooding.

The recovery and rebuild will be a long process. Tens of thousands of Houstonians will have to live in temporary housing for months and may be longer. Hurricane Harvey brought out the best of humanity and has made the Houston Chinese American community stronger than ever! Please read more...

Bridging Sides, UCA Held Asian Data Disaggregation Discussion

Recently, the topic of Asian data disaggregation has triggered an intense debate in the Chinese community. UCA organized a telephone conference to gain further understanding of the issue and to nurture a dialogue among people on different sides of the debate for the first time.

On August 7th, UCA invited some community leaders and UCA board members to a telephone panel discussion, moderated by Aryani Ong, a civil rights lawyer and UCA advisor. The panel includes Janelle Wong, Asian American Studies professor at the University of Maryland and Principal Investigator of the 2016 National Asian American Survey (NAAS); Karthick Ramakrishnan, professor and associate dean at the University of California-Riverside, Director and Principal Investigator of NAAS; Karin Wang, Vice President of Programs and Communications of Asian American Advancing Justice In LA (AAAJ); Quyen Dinh, Executive Director of Southeast Asia Resource Action Center (SEARAC); Robert Teranishi, Professor at the University of California-Los Angeles, The panelists presented the rationale for data disaggregation and collection.

The participating Chinese community leaders raised various questions regarding the matter. They also passed on some of the reservations and concerns from the Chinese community, and suggested some policy alternatives.

A few days later, Haipei Shue was invited by VOA to participate in a live discussion on the topic.

Influential Chinese

“Water Tossing Boulders” is a new book about how a family of Chinese immigrants led the fight to desegregate schools in the Jim Crow South. A generation before Brown v. Board of Education struck down America’s “separate but equal” doctrine, one Chinese family and an eccentric Mississippi lawyer fought for desegregation in one of the greatest legal battles never told before.

On September 15, 1924, Martha Lum and her older sister Berda were barred from attending the middle school in Rosedale, Mississippi. The girls were Chinese American and considered by the school to be “colored”; the school was for whites only. This event would lead to the first US Supreme Court case to challenge the constitutionality of racial segregation in Southern public schools, an astonishing thirty years before the landmark Brown v. Board of Education decision. Although the fight ended in failure, it set the precedence for future Chinese generations to follow. What can we learn from the struggle of Chinese pioneers for equal education rights? Read book review here...
